

INTRODUCTION

This book was researched and assembled during 2005 to provide as much information as possible about the nineteen men from this Parish who were killed during two world wars. Information is based on the Commonwealth War Graves records, accounts of military and naval actions, the 1901 census, Church records and discussions with members of the Community who are related to or knew those concerned.

The information is by no means complete and in some places may not be quite accurate. In a few cases little about individuals has been so far discovered. It is intended to correct and update the book whenever new material comes to hand.

If you can help with more information about any of the nineteen men please contact:
